Greater Regina Area on track, avoids tariff woes for now

BY CHRIS LANE

President & CEO, Economic Development Regina

This month's Economic Brief takes a deeper dive into the true scale and economic impact of Saskatchewan's spring seeding.

Spring seeding is underway, marking one of Saskatchewan's largest annual megaprojects. Over 34 million acres of wheat, canola, lentils, and barley are being planted, which could generate over $16.4B in farmgate value this year.

Despite global trade pressures, agriculture remains a key economic driver, with ripple effects across the farm input, manufacturing, logistics, and agri-food industries – especially in the Greater Regina Area (GRA). As Saskatchewan's largest annual megaproject, spring seeding is a high-stakes enterprise that sustains our economy and helps feed the world.

Other highlights from this brief include:

- In April 2025, the GRA's average year-over-year unemployment rate fell to 5.2 per cent from 6.5 per cent in April 2024. Saskatchewan has Canada's lowest provincial unemployment rate at 4.3 per cent, well below the national average of 6.9 per cent.
- Inflation in the GRA dropped to 2.1 per cent in April 2025, down from 2.5 per cent in March 2025. Saskatchewan and Canada's rates were 1.9 per cent and 1.7 per cent respectively. A key driver in the drop was the removal of the consumer carbon tax.
- Regina's average 1-bedroom apartment rental in April 2025 fell 2 per cent to $1,230 from April 2024 ($1,267). Average rent in April 2025 reduced 3 per cent to $1,311, keeping Regina the most affordable among 25 cities compared.
